Dear Anthony,

As Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner, I am writing in connection with my statutory responsibility to encourage good practice in the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution of modern slavery offences and the identification of victims. My office comprises of a small team with policy leads aligned to each of the priorities set out within my Strategic Plan 2019-2021: improving victim care and support; supporting law enforcement and prosecutions; focusing on prevention; getting value out of research and innovation; as well as a policy lead for international activity.

I was pleased to see the announcement¹ in late 2019 regarding the significant government investment to provide Police and Crime Commissioners in eighteen areas across England and Wales with additional funding for two years to tackle violent crime. I understand that this funding is being used to bring together multi-agency partners including the police, local authorities, the health sector, community groups and third sector organisations to establish or build upon existing Violence Reduction Units (VRUs) to better understand what is driving violent crime and deliver co-ordinated initiatives that focus on prevention and early intervention.

Earlier this year I began working with Public Health England and other key stakeholders to explore a public health approach to modern slavery², therefore am supportive of examining the evidence base and thinking about the root causes of complex societal issues to inform the way that whole system approaches can be used to prevent harm.

Given the considerable overlap between modern slavery, exploitation and serious violence, I am keen to understand more about the strategic priorities and the intervention activity being delivered by the VRUs across England and Wales. Having reviewed the Violence Reduction Units in Focus report³ recently published by the Association of Police and Crime Commissioners, I was interested to read about how the Thames Valley VRU is supporting initiatives such as the DIVERT Programme using mentors from Reading Football Club to prevent young people who have been arrested due to serious violence from re-entering the criminal justice system.

I would therefore be grateful if you would be willing to share with my office a copy of your Problem Profile/Strategic Needs Assessment and Response Strategy as well as any updates regarding progress on delivery. April McCoig, the Victims and Partnerships lead within my office will be co-ordinating responses and can be contacted at April.McCoig@iasc.independent.gov.uk.

Finally, I have recently published two reviews which may be of interest to you in relation to modern slavery and exploitation. The first is a report of findings⁴ from my call for evidence on use of the Modern Slavery Act(2015 Section 45 Statutory Defence which identified gaps in the safeguarding response for young people who had been criminally exploited. The second is a joint review produced in collaboration with ECPAT UK to identify what works in multi-agency decision making and the implications for child victims of trafficking⁵ to inform the development of a pilot to trial devolved National Referral Mechanism (NRM) decision making for children.

I look forward to receiving your response. In the interests of transparency, I request that you respond in a way that enables me to publish your letter on my website.

Yours sincerely,

Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner
